PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

RICHARD STIDSEN

The members of the Class of 1963 have gathered here today to commemorate on of the last few times that we shall be together as students; and as president of the class, it is my honor and privilege to extend a warm and cordial welcome to the many parents, teachers and friends who are here to witness our Class Day exercises.

Three short years ago, with much bewilderment and mixed emotions, we met each other for the first time, but after three years of hard work, fun and companionship, we have made friendships whose memories will remain with us always. During these years we have become a part of a tradition which few public schools can match. Although Classical is to be torn down and replaced, nothing will ever be able to destroy the warm feeling in the hearts of those who have attended this school, and its spirit will live on in each and every one of us.

The Classical heritage is born of high standards, of scholarship, of mutual cooperation between teachers and students and of a feeling of warm friendliness. During our years here we have worked hard, but it has not been done in vain. The world expects great and noble deeds, and because of our excellent training, many of us may be able to produce them.

As we leave here today, our paths will lead us in different directions, but let us meet the future with undying loyalty and gratitude to this institution which has educated us and has provided us with innumerable joys.

We would like to thank our parents, who have shared both our joys and our sorrows, but who have always stood by us, continually guiding us with their love. To you we owe a great deal. We would not have attained our goals had it not been for the help and encouragement which you have given us. To our teachers we would also like to say thank you for your patience, understanding and excellent guidance. You have taught us to admire high standards and worthy ideals; you are not sending us away emptyhanded. Our debt is great; our gratitude deep, and we shall not disappoint those who have made today possible for us. We shall bring credit upon Classical.

Once again I would like to welcome you to the last meeting of the Class of 1963.

Richard W. Stidsen

CLASS HISTORY

SANDRA LIAN

Upon entering Classical in September of 1960, we thought that we would never become familiar with our strange surroundings. That first day was unbelievable. As we sat in the auditorium, we felt as if we were some kind of wild animals in a menagerie being looked down upon by all who passed. There were so many bells and so much to remember that we longed for our good old days in junior high. As we grew accustomed to our new way of life, however, we found it to be very interesting. Such words as "Lano's," "Bobo," and "Salatubie" began to have some meaning to us.

Since we were only Sophomores, we were the so-called "onlookers." Of course, we were able to participate in any activity and attend any school functions we wanted, but, after looking at our idolized upper classmen, we felt shy and self conscious and very inferior.

The first three days at Classical were the worst. After realizing how the rooms are numbered and after finding that the girls' and boys' cafeterias are separated, everything else came naturally.

Before we knew it, however, summer vacation had arrived. It was a well-deserved relief from the daily hubbub of school life. Something had happened to us over the summer, because when we returned to Classical in the fall, there was a startling change. After a few days, we realized that we had finally become part of Classical. As a class, we elected Dick Stidsen as president; Carol Mason, vice-president; Jean Savage, secretary; and Steve H. Epstein as treasurer.

The harmless purr of the Classical tiger suddenly became a fierce roar. In football we were tied with North and South for the Interhigh Championship. There were five All-City boys from our team. Dick Stidsen, co-captain of the 1962 football squad, was among them.

The school activities that had seemed so remote the year before were now as familiar to us as old friends. As juniors, by joining many clubs we showed Classical's unique school spirit for we enthusiastically attended the many school functions.

We were fortunate enough to have in our class the 1962 Queen Esther-Phoebe Brown.

Basketball season ended in fine style. We won the District 3 Championship, our All-City Basketball Players being Kenny Kaufman and George Ridick.

Those parties after the basketball games will be remembered for a long time.

Alan Yoffie was the winner of the city-wide Public Speaking Contest.

Our prom, held at the Hillcrest Country Club, arrived to put the finishing touch on our junior year. Janice Babbitt was chosen Queen.

The long-awaited day had finally arrived — the day on which we would return to Classical as Seniors. We were no longer shy; now, we had the entire run of the school. All activities were put on by us and for us.

The fierce roar of the tiger was still heard on the football field. Again we were tied with South for the Interhigh Championship. The three All-City Players were Bill Donnelly, John Hakanson, and junior, George Anderson.

We elected Class Officers. Dick Stidsen was again elected president; Joan Fierer, vice-president; Phoebe Brown, secretary; and Dan Lettic treasurer.

The National Merit Scholarship semi-finalist was Jeff Davis. Letters of Commendation went to Bart Alfano, Jane Berol, Jay Caplan, Hanna-Mae Farber, Laura Gross, Susan Holbert, Bruce Jaffe, Henry Katz, Karen Peterson, Donald Quinn, Margaret Reiner, Mark Skinner, and Carolyn Trunca.

One brisk December morning, it was announced that there would be no school at Classical because of a fire. Horrified and stunned, the few early arrivers at school left and the latecomers, out of curiosity, went to investigate. The fire had originated near Room 27. Luckily, it was put out by the sprinkler system, the only real problem being water damage. Yes, the students of Classical had that day off, but the faculty had to remain there the entire day.

The coming of the new year brought the Interhigh Basketball games; our great team was tied with North for the Championship.

February 15th was the night chosen for the Variety Show, "The Gift of Music." Under the able direction of Mel Applebaum, the show was a great success. Again the adorable football players managed to steal the show with their belly-dance. The big night ended in a lively party at Maironis Park. It was certainly an evening to remember.

Another fire at Classical? Could it be possible? The first time was shocking; the second time was incredible. This time the fire was in Room 37, the mechanical drawing room. Fortunately, Mr. Reardon extinguished the fire in time and saved our school. March 6, 1963 will be an unforgettable day for both the students and the faculty of Classical High School.

The traditional Senior activities (the Hop, the Prom, and the Picnic) were held. All were great successes.

For the first time, we now realize what graduation really means. We have been looking forward to it for so long that now we may be a little frightened of it. For the past three years, everyone and everything that we see daily have been taken for granted. The usual ease with which we talk to our teachers will not be ours after this day. Our paths are now separating. All the struggles and good times of Classical life that we have shared together are soon to be only memories. One thought is ours: Graduation is truly a time filled with mixed emotions.

CLASS WILL – 1963

DANIEL COTTON

Thirty months plus four have passed since the plebeian group of sophomores with the inconsequential title of the Class of 1963 first entered the hallowed halls of Classical High School. During this time they have struggled to advance gradually from one caste to the next until at last they have attained their goal. They are now the elite.

Their position of grandeur is, however, short-lived, for all empires must eventually fall. The following is a tally of the riches they leave behind.

The Class of 1963 leaves its respect for and appreciation of Mr. Couming, Mr. Breen, the faculty, and the office personnel.

The Class leaves the guidance department alone.

The Class leaves Miss Gilbert five students who can recite all of Il Penseroso and L'Allegro.

The Class leaves Mr. Yoffe a bill for one-hundred New York Times.

The Class leaves duly inscribed tin cans to catch the raindrops.

The Class leaves gas masks to those whose home rooms are near the chemistry lab - - - or the lunchroom.

The Class, you see, leaves warning of the assignment of Mr. Koki's term papers, of course.

Jane Berol leaves the key to the building to any junior who arrives at 7:15.

The Keeney twins, Dennis and Dave, leave the confusion caused by their great resemblance to each other.

Evans Tsoules leaves, asking the chemistry assignment.

Mary Reardon and Jean Savage leave their part-time jobs in the office.

Joe Magliaro leave his parking space in front of school.

Bill Donnelly and John Hakanson leave for Newton Square or for Friendly's.

George Megrichian leaves his post outside Room 4 on Fridays to any patient junior.

Bart Alfano leaves for the Cape.

Mel Applebaum leaves his beret, sunglasses, and megaphone.

Ken Kaufman leaves his political post much to the regret of the General Court of Massachusetts.

George Ridick and Marc Greenberg leave Mr. Brennan in tears.

Julius leaves without having his name pronounced correctly once in three years.

Paul Langevin leaves (finally).

Rick Stidsen leaves his office after a maximum of two terms.

Pat Buckley leaves smiling for a change.

Phoebe Brown leaves Mr. Powers.

Henry Katz leaves his philosophical sayings.

Neil Davis leaves his saddle shoes.

Alan Yoffie leaves his voice to any soft-spoken junior girl.

The two Steve Epsteins and Wayne Millers leave their famous middle initials.

Ronny Thomashow leaves a job that, if you'll excuse the expression, smells.

Sandy Lian leaves her sophisticated ways to any serious junior.

Alan Liebman leaves his place in the lunch line.

Dan Lettic leaves town with the class treasury.

Jeff Davis leaves all his Superman comic books.

Bob Buckley leaves anything but his comb.

Bill Sweeney leaves his brother to carry on the tradition.

Bob Eager leaves, as his name indicates.

Joanie Fierer leaves speechless.

Herb Snyder leaves his ties.

Carol Morse and Lee Powers leave memorizing the atomic series.

I hereby exercise the power vested in me by declaring this document legal and true.

Signed,

Daniel Cotton, Testator

The Ghost of 1963

CLASS ORATION

ALAN YOFFIE

The death of Franklin Delano Roosevelt and the explosion of the first atomic bomb brought Americans in 1945 to the startling realization that an era in American history had passed away and that a totally new and challenging age in the evolution of mankind had arrived.

We are the children of this Atomic Age. The responsibility for the leadership of the United States and the free world will one day be in our hands. What type of world shall we be called upon to lead? What will our responsibilities be? How will our world differ from the one that our parents, who had their commencement in the "Roosevelt Era," had to face?

In 1933, when President Roosevelt first took office, one-third of the nation was "ill-clothed, ill-housed, and ill-fed." The United States was in the midst of the Great Depression. One out of every four workers, between twelve and fifteen million men, had lost their jobs. Thousands of people stood in bread lines to get food. For the high school graduate, the future did not look very bright. A college education meant sacrifice. Very few scholarships were available. Jobs were hard to find. There was no unemployment insurance. There was no federal minimum wage. There were few unions to protect jobs and those that did exist had very little influence or power. In 1933, there was no draft and only a small and selective peacetime army.

Conditions for the high school graduate did improve as the thirties progressed. It was not until 1941, however, when the United States entered World War II that economic recovery became complete. Very few graduates were at home during the war to enjoy this new prosperity.

The biggest problem that faces the world today is not economic depression but the threat of total thermonuclear destruction. Our parents had to face the prospect of hunger and joblessness upon their graduation from high school; we have to face the prospect of extermination. The fact that we know that the balance of power which now exists between the United States and the Soviet Union is uneasy and that scientists are continually altering this balance, makes our job of taking our place in society that much harder.

Our parents, upon their commencement, had to face the problems of the world immediately. The fact that most of us will be going to college and will not have to make this direct confrontation with the world does not lessen our obligations. College gives us more time to learn and to mature. When we are graduated from college and begin to accept our responsibilities, more will be expected from us.

Today no nation is immune to the political, military, or economic problems of other nations. As the potential leaders of one of the most powerful countries in the world, we, above all others, must work for cooperation and understanding. A greater need than ever before necessitates the extension of international compacts under which nations cooperate on common problems. We must continually reject the view that the less change there is, the better it is for us. Progress is inevitable and the more we can do to influence our progress, the safer democracy will be.

The era in which we shall be living will be revolutionary. Not since the days of Columbus has the imagination given us so much food for thought on the possibilities that lie ahead. Already trained men are exploring the stratosphere. The time may not be distant when orbital flights by you and me are commonplace and interplanetary travel, the rule; when we shall stop at space stations instead of gas stations; and when we shall look at the earth instead of the moon at night. Colonization of other planets as an answer to the population explosion is not inconceivable. The thought that there may be some other form of human life elsewhere cannot be rejected.

Exactly what the future will hold, no one can foretell. The fact that there will be difficulties is the only certainty. The challenge of diplomatic achievement and scientific exploration is before us. If we can successfully promote international cooperation to insure world peace, then we, the children of the Atomic Age, will open to our children, our children's children, and all the generations that follow, an era where striving to raise living standards and striving for elimination of disease will be the greatest concerns.
